

Independent Living Association: ILA Networking Event

Promoting high-quality Independent Livings in San Diego County

Chula Vista, CA – June 17, 2015 – The only thing better than eating really good Mexican food is eating really good Mexican food with passionate people who are making a positive impact on the world!

Last week, the Independent Living Association (ILA) hosted a networking event for Independent Living Association Members, people considering becoming Independent Living owners, and community partners in San Diego at Miguel's Cocina in Chula Vista.

People connected with old friends and made new professional relationships over the course of the happy hour. Each community partner took time to introduce themselves and their program, in order to ensure strong connections were being made cross-sector as everyone works toward finding quality housing for vulnerable populations.

The ILA also held a feedback session for all in attendance, gaining valuable feedback from Independent Living owners and the community at large about resources, courses, and opportunities the ILA can continue to provide or create to ensure the Independent Living community feels empowered and can continue the important work being done in San Diego.

We hope to see you at our next quarterly networking event on September 23rd!
