

Independent Living Association: ILA Networking Event

Promoting high-quality Independent Livings in San Diego County

San Diego, CA – December 16, 2015 – The Independent Living Association (ILA) hosted its final networking event for 2015 for Independent Living Association Members, people considering becoming Independent Living owners, and community partners at Oggi's Pizza and Brewing Company in Mission Valley.

With 20 Independent Living owners, those considering opening a home, and local community providers all gathered together, conversations flourished and connections were made. Those attendees just considering starting their business had a great opportunity to connect with more seasoned owners to ask advice and obtain insider knowledge. Business cards were exchanged with future plans to visit owners' homes to get a sense of how their homes are run. Providers in attendance shared their organizations' materials as part of a resource table provided at every ILA networking event. Other information shared with owners included information on the ILA's Member Incentive Program, a flyer with a list of food resources in San Diego County available to owners, as well as information on healthy recipes from eatfresh.org.

We look forward to continuing to offer networking events to our owners and community partners in 2016! Check the ILA's calendar for information on future networking events.
